FAILURE TO SURVIVE

Contract Indemnity Failure to Survive Insurance is a unique term policy specifically designed to indemnify contractual agreements. Its purpose is to indemnify a business contract upon the death of a key individual (usually the business owner or a key employee) with insurance. Coverage must be used for contractual agreements and it cannot be used as an alternative to personal-benefit life insurance.

Contract Indemnity Failure to Survive insurance is a brilliant and forward-thinking term policy for use to indemnify contractual agreements. Its many attributes have drawn a growing following of American brokers as of late, and it will prove to be very useful to your business clients. Failure to Survive coverage will save many of the cases you stand to lose for one reason or another.

One key aspect of the Failure to Survive plan is the financial underwriting. Since the policy is designed to indemnify a specific contract, traditional financial underwriting requirements (such as income or business revenue) are not as important. This has allowed the private equity space to grow significantly since more and more investors are getting into venture capital investing.

Medically sub-standard cases find easy solutions among the FTS product line as the underwriting guidelines are more flexible than those of traditional carriers, allowing for medical exclusions and coverage for persons with infirmities like cardiac, body mass and diabetes issues. It's also optimal for prospects with drug, alcohol and mental/nervous concerns.

The magic of the FTS product is that it can be underwritten quickly. The average turnaround time from receipt of application to the binding of coverage is usually no more than several business days. Underwriters offer simplified issuance of the coverage without requirements like intrusive medical exams, blood draws and urinalyses.

The fast underwriting period allows policy owners to meet the strict and time-sensitive deadlines mandated by lending institutions on loan agreements. An Failure to Survive policy can also be extremely useful when the underwriting of a traditional term product is holding-up a business deal relying upon the insurance for a corporate buy/sell or investment agreement.
